Monthly Commentary – July 2021

Outperformance and market strength continues

The Fairview Emerging Companies Fund rose 0.9% during the month, outperforming the Small Ordinaries Total Return Index by 0.2%.

The benchmark continued its impressive run, stringing together gains in the last six months consecutively to be up 11.8% over the period. It is surpassed by the ASX100 which has now delivered ten consecutive positive monthly returns.

Australia shines

Regionally, Australia was the best performing market. China's Shanghai Index (-10%) and the Hang Seng Index (-6%) both fell due to China's regulatory crackdown on the technology sector and the need for government control over the country's data. However, a possibly bigger surprise by the Chinese government during the month was the cut to the amount of liquidity their banks need to hold (known as the reserve requirement ratio), allowing a lower credit cost and possibly, more liquidity into its economy. This was in sharp contrast to the recent announcements of credit tightening, and possibly a precursor to what has subsequently been revealed – rising COVID Delta strain infections.

The $A drops

Also noteworthy was the recent slide in the Australian dollar. Over the last two months the $A has fallen 5% versus the US dollar to reach the lowest level since December 2020, and a 12-month low, when compared to the British pound. Chief financial officers will be keenly watching the $A direction in the context of import prices (think retailers) as well as the translation of overseas earnings (exports).

De-carbonisation underpins resources

Battery minerals continued to be a key theme for investors with three lithium companies (Galaxy Resources, Orocobre and Pilbara Minerals) all delivering >20% share price gains during the month. All appeared in the top ten best index performers. While lithium and the mention of electric vehicles attracted little attention at the Diggers and Dealers Conference two years ago, it was very prominent at this year's event. For context, the lithium spodumene price has doubled since its lows and gained a further 10% in July. Coinciding with a bounce back in resources this month, mining service companies (Perenti, MACA and NRW) were strong for the first time in a while, despite the labour cost inflation and productivity headwinds being faced by the sector. A common theme amongst the key laggards was cost. While Marley Spoon spooked the market with lower gross profit margin guidance, both Medical Developments and HUB24 were lower due to analysts expecting cost reinvestment. This is a relatively common theme following a year which saw many companies enjoy high revenues and suppressed costs. M&A activity continued, but most was at the bigger or smaller end of the ASX, and no portfolio holdings were targets. Alas, Capricorn Metal made an astute acquisition of a WA-based gold deposit towards the period end.

Delta means no earnings guidance

The virulent COVID Delta strain is causing growing alarm. At the time of writing, Victoria has entered its sixth lockdown and NSW daily cases are reaching new high levels. China is imposing travel and movement restrictions across 16 provinces (including Beijing and Shanghai) as reportedly a 'few hundred' of COVID cases have emerged. While none of this will provide companies the fortitude to give forward looking guidance, it is pleasing to see Boris Johnson's UK social experiment so far seems to be working with hospitalisations and deaths well below the February peak levels. The UK's full vaccination rate is 3x Australia's current level and about 1.7x, the lowest vaccinated state of America, Alabama.

It is still early days in this reporting season, but so far, it is shaping to be consistent with expectations, where trading updates will be critical to share price reactions.
